

How can a camera see interference from a photon that never passed through the slits?